1. Purpose. The School of Medicine exists in order to provide teaching and learning opportunities for students and to undertake excellent and relevant research. The way in which the School pursues these goals is captured in the strategic plan, this document describes the structures the school utilises to function. Much of what the school does overlaps; linkages between research and teaching affect the staff that are recruited, the students that are drawn to St Andrews and the way the school expresses itself in the public domain however to try and simplify the governance structure this documents refers to 'functions' that are applicable across all the school's activity.
