

MEDICAL STUDENTS – HEALTH, DISABILITY AND REASONABLE ADJUSTMENTS

Students who require extra support and/or adjustments due to a health or disability condition

1. Applicants should inform the University of any impairment or disability or health related condition at the application stage. Examples include mental and physical health conditions and specific learning difficulties such as dyslexia. Declaring a health condition or disability is very important because it will enable the school to understand how it may affect the student's medical training and will allow the school to review, agree and implement any support or reasonable adjustments that may be required.
2. Once students have registered this they will have an opportunity for any adjustments that may be put in place to be reviewed every academic session.
3. Please note that if an impairment or disability or health related condition develops or is diagnosed after the application stage or during the medical degree, we ask that you please declare this as soon as possible so we can discuss this with you to provide appropriate support. Offer holders with injuries or scheduled health appointments that you anticipate may interrupt your studies should be brought to the attention of the School of Medicine as soon as possible by contacting the Medical Student Support Team at medsupport@st-andrews.ac.uk

  - b. Make an appointment with a St Andrews University Disability Adviser: <https://www.st-andrews.ac.uk/students/advice/disabilities/>

Information about reasonable adjustments

8. According to the Equality Act 2010, reasonable adjustments should be made for individuals with a disability, although this Equality Act accepts that for specific professional requirements some adjustments may be unreasonable and inappropriate. The GMC require that Medical Schools only award degrees to individuals who are fit to practise medicine as doctors. Guidelines on supporting students with mental health have been published by the General

University of St Andrews - School of Medicine Handbook

a. Medical Council (GMC) and the Medical Schools Council (MSC), and this guidance applies equally to physical disability concerns. Importantly, reasonable adjustments that are made to support students due to a health or disability condition must follow the overriding principle that students must be able to work safely and independently in clinical practice.

9. Reasonable adjustments can include additional time allowance in academic written examinations (commonly no more than 25%), lecture handouts being made available prior to lectures, technological aids such as recording lectures in the academic environment.

10. Examples of adjustments which are unlikely to be regarded as reasonable and not compatible with medical fitness to practise include requirement for a scribe or a person to take notes (Medical Schools Council, National transfer of information, 2017, page 9), or requirements for private rooms for written exams (HEOPS, General guidance on adjustments, 2016, page 2). This having been said we realise this is a complex area and decisions would be made following careful review on a case by case basis so please do not hesitate to contact the Medical School Disability Co-ordinator (Linda Kirkcaldy meddisability@st-andrews.ac.uk) if you have any questions.
